DIGITAL CATALOG | WINTER 2025

*This Christmas,
Santa shops
Kansas farms*

Shopping for unique Christmas gifts just got easier with this Shop Kansas Farms Christmas catalog. Listed in these pages are some of our favorite farmers, ranchers and growers who can ship their products or, if they have a storefront, you can go shop their store.

Purchasing presents for family and friends from local Kansas farms ensures you can give gifts with stories attached because you know the people who made the gift. You can also rest easy knowing your purchases help support a family farm.

The greatest joy I've had since creating Shop Kansas Farms more than five years ago is to help consumers like you learn to purchase from the wonderful farm and ranch families of Kansas who grow the food we eat. This catalog has been created to make it even easier to Shop Kansas Farms!

"Thank you for having such high standards! Taking great care and pride in one's product, and caring about your customers, is something that is rare these days. So THANK YOU! I have enjoyed the garlic powder I purchased a couple of weeks ago. The flavor is awesome and so much better than store-bought! I definitely will be a return customer! Thank you!" - Jeri

YEAR IN REVIEW 2025

This year, Shop Kansas Farms (SKF) continued to grow as a powerful platform connecting Kansans with the farmers, ranchers and makers who feed our communities. From two successful Market of Farms, two growing Harvest Hubs, a national presence in D.C. and expanded outreach, we celebrated local food, rural entrepreneurship and the spirit of Kansas agriculture in 2025.

MARKET OF FARMS

In March, Douglas County Farm Bureau sponsored a Market of Farms in Lawrence with at least 600 people shopping directly from 20 Kansas vendors. Jeff Jones of Jones Premium Beef in Seneca said he gained more than 100 new customers that day.

In October, more than 20 vendors connected with at least 1,000 consumers at the SkyLofts at the Heritage in Andover.

The next Market of Farms will be March 28 in Douglas County, again sponsored by Douglas County Farm Bureau. Mark your calendar now and plan to stock up on Kansas-grown products.

GREAT AMERICAN FARMERS MARKET

Kansas growers were on the national stage when SKF attended the Great American Farmers Market in D.C. in August. Beef, jam, honey, coffee and pepper jelly were front and center at the booth.

"We're so grateful we had the opportunity to showcase Shop Kansas Farms and a few of the incredible products grown in our state," says Kylee Stout, SKF business development manager. "In addition to engaging with U.S. Department of Agriculture leaders, we were able to provide national exposure for SKF and showcase just some of the high-quality food we produce in Kansas."

SHOPPING AT THE KANSAS STATE FAIR

Shop Kansas Farms vendors also had the opportunity to get in front of consumers at this year's Kansas State Fair when they rented booth space with Kansas Farm Bureau. More than eight vendors connected with State Fair visitors over the 10-day festival.

With your help, we continue to grow in our online community, now reaching more than 170,000 fans.

Shop Kansas Farms remains a vibrant hub for buying local, eating fresh and building stronger rural economies. Here's to an even more connected and impactful 2026!

BORDER QUEEN HARVEST HUB

YEAR IN REVIEW

The Border Queen Harvest Hub (BQHH) in Caldwell had a tremendous year of growth.

In February, Jen Kern was hired as its executive director. Kern was born and raised in Caldwell and was looking for a new experience after retiring from education.

“With 32 years of experience as an educator and administrator in public education, I have dedicated my career to serving communities and fostering growth,” Kern says. “Now, as the executive director of the Border Queen Harvest Hub, I am excited to support local farmers by connecting them with opportunities to sell their produce locally.”

Jill Kuehny, KanOkla CEO; Jen Kern, Border Queen Harvest Hub executive director; and Kylee Stout and Rick McNary of Shop Kansas Farms, were recipients of the 2025 Huck Boyd Leaders of the Year Award in Economic Development.

The Hub saw a 46 percent growth in new farms added to the website, www.borderqueenharvesthub.com, and now includes 160 growers from Butler, Cowley, Harper, Kingman and Sumner counties along with farms in Oklahoma.

The Hub also boasts a brand-new commercial kitchen in Caldwell that was funded in part from a K-State 105 grant along with monies from Sumner County Economic Development and Shop Kansas Farms. BQHH members receive discounted pricing on the kitchen, which also offers classes on canning, baking and milling.

BQHH was also one of seven entities to be honored by K-State’s Huck Boyd National Institute for Rural Development as the 2025 Huck Boyd Leaders of the Year in economic development.

To stay up to date on BQHH happenings, join the Facebook group at www.facebook.com/groups/borderqueenharvesthub.

Rosie Bosse, Author and History Lover

From the great plains of Kansas, Rosie Bosse began her writing career by delighting her grandchildren with tales of farm life and animals of all kinds. Her children's books are a compilation of those stories including Patty, the Pink Flamingo and Gertrude, the LOUD Chicken. Rosie is a whiz at spinning yarns off the top of her head and takes as much delight as her readers as she tells her tales.

Her love of history, the old West, and ranching life inspired her to write her first historical western novel, North to Cheyenne, The Long Road Home. This book was the beginning of her Home on the Range series. The eleven books in that series are filled with cattle drives, box suppers, cowboys, danger, and just a little romance.

SEDGWICK COUNTY HARVEST HUB

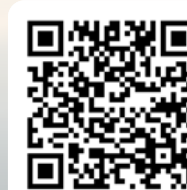

The Sedgwick County Harvest Hub (SCHH) connects local farmers, ranchers and food growers with consumers who value fresh, Kansas-grown products. Through our programs and the Border Queen Commercial Kitchen, we help strengthen our local food system by supporting small producers, promoting farm-to-table access and building community connections around local agriculture. Whether you're looking to buy local, sell local or learn new skills through our educational classes, the Harvest Hub is your go-to resource for all things local food in south-central Kansas.

degree from Fort Hays State University. Prior to joining the SCHH, Elpers worked for the National Resources Conservation Service, National Western Stock Show and the Pro Rodeo Cowboys Association. In addition to her role at SCHH, Elpers is pursuing a master's degree in business administration.

"I'm eager to help the Sedgwick County Harvest Hub connect farmers and consumers," Elpers says. "I'm most excited about helping, whether it's developing a new income stream for a farmer or seeing the education that comes from growers and consumers interacting with each other."

Renee Elpers is leading the charge in Sedgwick County. She grew up on a family farm near Cheney, which is where she developed a strong understanding of what it takes to grow food. She received her bachelor's
